

Part II—Short Essay

Like college, the Franklin Residential College is what you make it. The same goes for your application. Listed below are eight prompts. Please choose three and answer them to the best of your ability in paragraph form (1-2 paragraphs for each prompt). Don't be afraid to have fun. Please indicate which prompt you are addressing before each answer.

- What is your favorite quote and why?
- If you had a chance to rename the Franklin Residential College, what would you call it and why?
- Design your own major. What courses would be required for this major? What would you do after you graduated with this major?
- Which super hero/villain would you like to be and why? Or invent your own super hero. (What would you call yourself? What powers would you possess? What is your alter ego? etc.)
- You are alone in an elevator, singing along to the song playing on the loud speaker. When the door opens at the next floor, your professor gets on the elevator with you. What was your reaction? Did you stop dancing? What song was it? What happens next?
- If there was a law that you could only own one book (other than your religious text), what would you choose and why?
- What's your biggest regret? If you could, what could you do to fix it?
- If you could live in any point in history, when would it be and why?

Please attach your answers to your application, and make sure your initials are on each page.

Part III—The Fine Print

By completing and submitting this application, I understand that my admission to the Franklin Residential College is contingent upon the Admissions Committee's evaluation of my responses to the above questions. I also acknowledge that I understand the expectations as stipulated in the preface to this application. I acknowledge that acceptance into the Franklin Residential College is granted for only the following academic term. In addition, I recognize that once I accept a place in the Residential College, my name will be removed from all other on-campus housing options. I also understand that Franklin Residential College members are expected to participate in a dorm-sponsored organization of their choosing. Each resident must participate in the work of at least one committee in a satisfactory manner in order to continue his or her membership the following year.
